RESEARCH INTERESTS

Empirical analysis of substance abuse, mental health, and other health-related outcomes as these areas intersect spirituality and religion; cultural competency, particularly with spiritually based sub-cultures among minority, disenfranchised, and working class populations; instrument construction and research methodology; research on clinical assessment and practice that focuses on spiritual assessment and utilizing spiritual strengths as an aid in recovery and well-being.

TEACHING INTERESTS

Human diversity, with an emphasis upon the spiritual strengths of minority groups and other disenfranchised populations. Research methods, program evaluation, social policy, substance abuse, cultural competency, and clinical assessment and practice, particularly as these domains intersect the area of spirituality.
